

ANOTHER FIGHTING ROOSEVELT HOME WITH WAR HONOR

Capt. Philip J., Cousin of Former President, Won French Cross and Palm in Air.

Capt. Philip J. Roosevelt, one of the many Roosevelts who helped win the war, son of W. Emlen Roosevelt and a cousin of the late ex-President, returned home to-day on the transport Suriname, after a year and a half's service abroad. Big Phil—his six foot six, if he's an inch—came back with the French War Cross and one palm, which were awarded to him for combats in the air over Chateau-Thierry but of which the modest airman will say nary a word.

Asked what he was decorated for, he replied that he didn't know. "Well, where did you get them?" his interrogator continued.

"They were served out as rations," Capt. Roosevelt used to be a ship news reporter before the war. He also had been busy getting out propaganda on preparedness and to show that he was prepared entered the aviation service when this country went to war.

He went over to France and was attached to the pursuit wing of the first American Aviation Group. He returned as a casual officer and went to his home at No. 891 Fifth Avenue.

The first detachment of the first bakery company to come home arrived on the Suriname. There was one white officer and three negro cooks of a company of 101. The bakery was located quite a distance from the front, but the German airships used to fly over there occasionally and try to drop bombs in the bread. Anti-aircraft guns protected the bakers and cooks while they worked day and night turning out twelve-pound loaves of bread for the army. One of the returning cooks declared that they used to see the twelve-pound loaves at the attacking German airships, but this was denied by the Lieutenant.

Lieut. Harry Blumer, who returned, lived at No. 250 Fulton Street, Brooklyn. He was an interpreter and had attended the training school at Langres, where a six weeks' course was given to those who understood German. In all 350 interpreters were turned out, who translated papers, letters and cards taken from the German prisoners, thereby securing important information.

COAL EXCHANGE UNDER FIRE.

Railroad Men, Operators and Consumers Present Objections.

Objections to the rules and practices of the Tidewater Coal Exchange, organized under the Council of National Defense, are expected to be made tomorrow at a meeting of bidders coal operators, railroad representatives and large consumers of coal to be held at the Hotel Shorham in Washington. Many New York coal men are expected to attend. The nature of the objections has not been learned.

The exchange was organized to effect a saving in the use of freight cars in the trans-shipment of the fuel.

Direct from the Orient JAPANESE and CHINESE ROBES OF LEISURE For Women and Misses

ALL of the feminine fashions which have their origin in the Orient necessarily are robes d'intérieur because an Oriental woman of caste is rarely seen outside the privacy of her "four walls".

This accounts for the picturesque styles, the fineness of the silken materials and the intricacies of the elaborate hand-embroidered decorations—an expression of the art of a people wonderfully talented and artistic.

Robes of leisure, of unsurpassed beauty and charm with the atmosphere of the land of exotic flowers, tinkling temple bells and the sandal-wood scented mystery of the Orient.
